Welcome Message from the President of ICCA

I look forward to welcoming all of you to the ICCA Congress that will be held in Mauritius from 8-11 May 2016. It is a special event for ICCA, marking the first time in our organization's 50-year history that we will gather in Africa for an ICCA Congress. It also reflects an important milestone in our field—the recognition that international arbitration now plays an important role across the African continent as a whole. The Host Committee, led by Salim Moodley, has been hard at work since its successful Tech 2015 event, preparing to welcome us to this beautiful country.

The leadership of the Programme Committee, James Marikani, and the team are proving a thought-provoking programme which will address the relationship in theory and in practice between international arbitration and the development of the rule of law. We are all aware of the role that international arbitration plays in bringing about investor-state, state-state, and other types of disputes. But what about the wider question of how it impacts the rule of law more generally? During the Mauritius 2016 Congress, our speakers will explore this and related questions. Our hope is that participation by you and, in particular, your sharing of real-life experiences, will enrich the dialogue and ensure that ideas are appropriately tested.

Since ICCA was opened to general membership in 2001, we have witnessed the tremendous value of member participation in our interest groups and committees. Our members now number nearly 300, and they have nearly 100 interest groups for practitioners, judges, scholars, and others with an interest in arbitration. Young ICCA�ers are energized from strength to strength. We have formed member task forces dealing with matters such as our conference on international arbitration and the American Bar Association's rule of law initiative. The ICCA Prize, funded by the International Bar Association's Younger Lawyers Division, and other initiatives are enhancing the value of membership and the opportunities for involvement in ICCA. The programme of events at the Congress will provide a valuable opportunity to discuss these developments and to explore the future of the ICCA and the development of international arbitration.

I thank you for your participation in the ICCA Congress.

With best wishes,
